Manfred Wörner, 53, West Germa-ny's minister of defense since the center-right Christian Democrats took office in 1982, will become secretarygeneral of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in July. He talked to Joseph Fitchett of the International Herald Tribune about the outlook for the alliance.

Brussels evade problems in the alliance? A. The alliance is in good shape; we are on a safe track. The summit was a success because leaders stressed the two essentials for security: political solidarity and military strength and, on that basis, the search for dialogue and cooperation, including arms control. The alliance agreed to actively continue further development of a comprehensive concept for security, disarmament and arms control. Already, hundreds of Azerbaijanis are gathering in Baku and some are stockpiling weapons to be used in the protest, a source said.

Some Armenian dissidents have also threatened to call another mass rally in the Armenian capital of Yerevan on March 26 if the Kremlin rejects their appeal for unification with Nagorno-Kara-bakh, which is more than 75 percent Armenian even though it is part of the republic of Azerbaijan. However, the organizers of last month's protest in Yerevan are di-vided over whether to to support another protest or to allow the Sovict leadership more time to resolve the issue. Reagan Warns of 'Bloc' On the Doorstep of U.S.

WASHINGTON - A series of domino-style Communist takeovers in Central America would confront the United States with a hostile bloc on its doorstep resemhing Western Europe's confronta-tion with Soviet-controlled Eastern Europe, President Ronald Reagan suggested in an interview Friday with the International Herald Tri-

"This is their goal," he said, citing a perhaps-apocryphal Lenin prophecy to prove it. Lenin, Mr. Reagan said, predicted "that the final battles would come in Lauin America and then, as he put it, once they had seized that, they wouldn't have to take the United States It would fall into their outstretched hands like overripe fruit."

Several administration officials said that they suspected the Lenin quotation was apocryphal, but that Mr. Reagan often used it privately to underscore his own strong convictions.

Asked if an anti-U.S. threat might conceivably develop in Central America to an extent that would require U.S. forces to be redirected there from Western Eu-rope, Mr. Reagan said: "Well, yes, there are situations in which this could happen."

The issue of Central America, and particularly that of Nicara-gua's ruling Sandinists, provoked Mr. Reagan to depart from the equanimity he displayed during most of the interview. He accused the press and the U.S. Congress of ignoring the administration's evidence about the seriousness of the threat south of the U.S. border.

Asked whether he thought that Mr. Gorbachev had abandoned any ambition of establishing Soviet hegemony over Central America, Mr. Reagan said: "What he may believe, I don't know." But he repeatedly left open the possibility that Mr. Gorbachev might repudiate what Mr. Reagan described as a long-term Soviet strategy of estab-lishing bases in Central America, with help from Cuba, Libya and McDonald's now sells more than a quarter of all fast food. The 130,000 fast-food outlets in the United States sold $55.7 billion worth of hamburgers, pizzas, fried chicken and other quick snacks and sales last year. Although the figure is ex-pected to climb to more than $60 billion this year, double-digit ananal increases are a thing of the past. A national debate is growing over what to do with valuable real estate being sold by railroads because they no longer need it for tracks. The 300,000 miles of track once owned by U.S. railroads have been halved in recent decades. Some of the unused right-of-way is used for public trails, but much of it is being sold to developers. More than 130 million acres of public land was given to railroads as construction incentives from 1850 to 1870, and trail enthusiasts say the railroads owe the public something in remrn. The railroads say they have long since repaid the country for the land grants, in the form of subsidized mail and military travet, and the development of the West that the land grants made possible. Frank Wilner, spokes-

Now San Jose is trying to narrow the image gap as well by sinking a billion dollars into skyscrapers and a trolley system. GOVERNMENT GUARANTEED LOTTERY Lotto 6/49 is an official lottery operated by the ten Provincial Governments of Canada. It's called Lotto 6/49 because six winning numbers from a total of forty-nine are selected each draw. If the six numbers chosen match the six numbers you are playing, you win the jackpot. In addition to the six regular winning numbers chosen, there's one additional number drawn called the "bonus number". If you have any five of the six regular winning numbers correct plus the bonus number, you win second prize. Any five, four, or three of the regular winning numbers correct wins you third, fourth, or fifth prize respectively.

There's a new draw twice each week (on Wednesday and Saturday), every week of the year. The jackpot is guaranteed to be not less than $1 Million dollars in each draw. And if the jackpot is not won in the current draw, that prize money is carried over and added to the jackpot for the next draw, growing until it's won!

YOU PICK YOUR OWN NUMBERS Besides the enormous prizes to be won, the best thing about Lotto 6/49 is that you pick your own numbers. So, instead of just buying a ticket, you really do play this lottery. Cuomo Vows to Decide BUSH: On Endorsement Soon

By Paul Taylor

Washington Pest Service
WASHINGTON — Goveroor Mario M. Cuomo of New York, irritated by speculation that his failure to endorse a Democratic presidential candidate means he is holding out in bopes he will drafted at the party convention, says he will decide soon on wbether to make an

In two telephone interviews Friday -- both initiated by the governor - Mr. Cuomo said he wanted to "be of maximum influence in finding the right candidate and doing it as swiftly as possible."

"I need to dispose of my role." he said. "and get it out of the way. What I don't like is all this speculation about what I am going to do. It's a distraction.

Mr. Cuomo said again that "the Democratic nomince will come from the field. Period.

On the possibility of a deadlock at the Democratic National Convention this summer, he said, "t will be there to say No to Bradley. No to Nunn, No to Cuomo," He was referring to Senators Bill Bradley of New Jersey and Sam Nunn of Georgia, both of whom have been mentioned as possible alternatives to the current Democratic field.

Mr. Cuomo added, "I am concerned that we get into a situation where we have to broker at the convention or just prior to the convention. That is undestrable,"

Mr. Cuomo acknowledged that if he were to endorse and promote a candidate before the April 19 New York Democratic primary, he might be able to help create a Democtatic coalescence.

Still, what Mr. Cuomo stressed was his need to douse the "Cuomo draft" speculation, It kicked up again last week, he noted, after an article based on an interview with him appeared in The Wall Street Journal and an appearance on ABC left the impression that be had decided to wait until June to

He said it was not his intention to send such a signal, although he tough fight and the only way to get did not rule out a late endorsement.

Mr. Cuomo declined to specu-late about whom he might endorse. He said he would talk with all five remaining candidates — either face-to-face or on the telephone this week.

But Mr. Cuomo's complicated state of mind on the whole subject may be best reflected by a followup telephone call. He said he had forgot to mention earlier that be was concerned about the publication early next month of an unau-thorized biography of him, by Rob-ert McElvaine, that he said had advance sales of 45,000 copies. He said he understood that the book was very flattering but was written from the premise that be had an "obligation" to be president.

This, Mr. Cuomo insisted, was a eratic coalescence.

the same. Michigan calls its event a caucus, but it is more like an abbreviated party-run primary: voters in predominantly black congressional districts. Mr. Dukakis stands the more than 500 locations in a sixbour period simply vote.

Mr. Gephardt not only faces a large gap between him and the front-runners but within days of the Michigan balloting he must make an important personal decision because of the deadline for filing for House races in Missouri. He must decide whether to give up his House seat and his place on the Ways and Means Committee as a signal of his seriousness about the race, or to announce his intention to seek his House seat again while still seeking the nomination.

For Mr. Gore and Mr. Simon, the Michigan outcome is likely to raise new questions about their candidacies. Mr. Gore, following last week's fourth-place showing in the Illinois primary, apparently the fall campaign is going to be a faces the likelihood of another poor showing in another northern, industrial state, increasing the evidence that his appeal is limited to the South.

Mr. Simon has all but abandoned Michigan. His campaign is falling back on Wisconsin's April 5 primary and the bope, according to with the May 3 primary in Ohio, Elliott Jacobson, his Michigan campaign director, that he will be a

Iran Says Iraq Used Nerve Gas

5,000 Kurds Die, Tehran Tells UN

The Associated Press

NICOSIA — Iran said it fired 13 missiles into Baghdad and Basra on Sunday and asserted that 5,000 Kurds were killed in Iraqi poison-gas attacks on towns that Tehran said it had captured in a new offen-

The official Iranian news agency IRNA, monitored in Nicosia, said the Iragis had used cvanide, mustard and nerve gases in the attacks on the towns in northeastern Iraq "to prevent the people from joining Iranian combatants.

The agency quoted Foreign Minister Ali Akhar Velayati of Iran as telling UN Secretary-General Ja-vier Perez de Cuellar that in addition to the 5.000 people killed. 4,000 Kurdish civilians had heen injured in the attacks.

Mr. Velavati said that 70 percent of the Kurdish casualties were women and children. There was no independent confirmation available on the Iranian allegations.

The United Nations has reported that Iraq has used chemical weapons in combat on many occasions since 1984. Baghdad has denied this. Iran has said that if Iraq continued to use the weapons, it also would start using them.

IRNA said that Mr. Velayati had criticized the United Nations for failing to take "effective stees" to halt Iraqi use of poison gases.

Iran said that nearly 1,000 of the Kurdisb casualties had been airlifted to hospitals in Iran. It appealed to the International Red Cross and other bumanitarian agencies for medical aid.

The Iranians said they captured the towns of Halabja. Kholmar and Dojaila in Sulaimaniya Province on Thursday, during a weeklong offensive in the northeastern mountains. Many of the Kurds in the region have been in rehellion against the Baghdad government for years.

Meanwhile, shipping sources in the Gulf reported Sunday that Ira-nian gunboats had attacked the 84,631-ton Liberian-flag tanker Atlantic Peace with rocket-propelled grenades. The sources said there were no casualties.

It was the fourth Iranian attack on ships of noncombatant nations in the Gulf in three days, and it day on Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal, in which at least two tankers

But the use of guns and bombs by Palestinians inside Israel is far from unheard of. Incidents have included a grenade attack on a military ceremony at the Western Wall a sacred Jewish site in lerner a sacred Jewish site in Jerusalem's Old City.

Mr. Arafat and other Palestinian leaders outside the occupied territories have repeatedly attempted to infiltrate guerrillas into Israel.

Earlier this month, three Palestinians from Mr. Arafat's el-Fatah guerrilla organization hijacked a bus in the Egav Desert. They were slain by security forces and three Israeli passengers were also killed.

On Saturday, the Israeli Army effectively blocked foreign journal-ists from working in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip in an apparent effort to reduce coverage of more than three months of Palstinian protests.

Virtually everywhere the foreign journalists went on Saturday they were stopped by soldiers who unfolded a mimeographed order de-claring the immediate area a "closed military zone" and ordered them away.

Members of four television crews and several photographers were rounded up Saturday afternoon by soldiers on the streets of Ramallal and taken to the police station.

There, they said, they were told by an army captain that if they were found in the area after being warned, they would be arrested.

■ Warning From Rabin

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin reacted to the shooting of the Israeli soldier by warning that the Israeli Army would take tougher measures if Palestinian protesters began to replace stones with firearms, Reuters reported from Jerusalem.

There might be extreme elements in the terrorist organizations of the Palestinians that might like to add to the so-called civilian violence elements of terrorism," told reporters at the Western Wall. "Let's hope that this was an exception that will not be repeated. Otherwise, tougher measures will be used to cope with both the civilian distuibances and the terrorism."

And Moscow has veered erratically, one day say-ing the deal is off, the next day saying that it will withdraw regardless, on its own terms. The Soviet position should become clearer when Secretary of State George Shultz meets in Washington this week with Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze. But is the Reagan administration prepared to make the kind of deal it has hinted at all along, namely the one Moscow now offers: Soviet withdrawal in 10 months in return for an end to U.S. aid to the Afghan resistance once the exit begins? Washington instead now ups the ante-demanding that Moscow also halt future aid to Kabul. Is this essential, or merely pandering to congressional pressure for tougher terms? Is it not clear that Soviet troops, not Soviet arms, sustain the pupper regime?

While Washington demands the unesse tial, Islamabad asks the unachievable - the formation of an interim coalition regime before the pullout begins, All that unites the fragmented insurgents is contempt for the Kabul regime and refusal to participate in a coalition with Communists.

Pakistan says Afghan refugees will not return home with the risk of chaos after a Soviet withdrawal. But is continuation of a brutal war preferable? Afghans have by fierce tradition preferred a weak central authority, and even the Russians seem now to grasp the cost of offending that history. The declared aim of the accord negotiated by a United Nations intermediary is to end an occupation and gnarantee Afghan non-abignment under whatever regime Afghans shape for themselves. This is achievable and legitimate. It could bring the first retreat of Soviet forces in decades, shattering the Brezhnev Doctrine dogma that Communist takeovers are irreversible. It would vindicate the wisdom of U.S. aid to the Afghan resistance.

Those are big prizes - and this is a chance to be seized, not put at risk by

Richer Than They Feel

Show the Russians the Exit

Among the large countries, the Japanese are now, per capita, the richest. The West Germans are second and the Americans third. That is what the rise of the yen and the Deutsche mark has done to the rankings. We are speaking of gross national product per person, converted into dollars at market exchange rates. By that reckoning, Japan's GNP per person in 1987 was $19,642. West Germany's was $18,499 and the United States's was $18,406.

The Japanese and the Germans probably would respond that they do not feel quite that rich and that these figures overstate their actual standards of living. And that is true. When a country's currency rises, imports become cheaper. But there is no immediate effect on most of the things on which people spend their money - housing, services or the things made in their own country. Rent or a haircut or a meal in a restaurant is no less expensive in Tokyo simply because the yea is worth twice as much in dollars as it was three years ago.

In an attempt to reach beyond the erratic swings in exchange rates, economists have worked out a method to compare wealth across national boundaries in terms of each currency's purchasing power in its country. In these terms, the figures for 1986 (the latest available) show output per capita in Japan and West Germany at about three-quarters the U.S. level. Those figures come about as close as possible to providing a true compari-son of material standards of living, Japanese and Europeans have fewer cars per person than Americans, they have fewer television sets, they live in somewhat smaller houses that are heated less luxuriously and so forth.

But the new rankings reflect one thing absolutely accurately, and that is financial power. Market exchange rates may not pro-vide an accurate translation of the way people live at home. But they show preci what their money is worth as it crosses from one country to another, to buy and to be invested. Most of the world's biggest banks are now Japanese, and Germany is the pow-chouse of the West European economy. Does all this mean that Americans' incomes are fated to keep declining in rela-tion to those of their suddenly richer competitors? Hardly. The dollar has slid downward because of a period of gross overspending and overconsumption. Americans have the power to put their economy back into balance whenever they choose. Rather than radically reversing the rankings, it is more likely that all the rich countries will converge over the next decade at roughly the same level of material wealth. - THE WASHINGTON POST.

For a Mideast Peace That Endures

By Hermann F. Eilts, Samuel W. Lewis and William B. Quandt

WASHINGTON - In 1979, President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel signed a historic peace treaty between their countries on the front lawn of the White House, For three of us in the audience - the U.S. ambassadors to Egypt and Israel and a member of the National Security Council staff, all deeply involved in the Camp David negotiations—there was a feeling of relief, pride and hope, mixed with some apprehension about what would come next. Even then we realized that, without common ground between Israel and the Arabs on bow to resolve the Palestinian problem, it would be diffi-cult to make further progress toward Arab-Israeli peace. Now, as the Reagan administration tries to get the Middle East peace process restarted, we feel the time has come for the U.S. government to try to bring represen-tative Palestinians, as well as Jordan, into direct negotiations with Israel.

This is not just our personal reaction to recent events on the West Bank and Gaza. It is the conclusion of a group of 19 Americans with interest and expertise in the Middle East who have been meeting since last spring. The group's report, to he published this week by the Brookings Institution, will recommend Israeli-Palestinian negotiations within an international framework.

Much of what we propose is not so different from what the administration is attempting. But while we can admire the diplomatic tactics and the personal commitment of Secretary of State George Shuitz, we wonder if the current initiative has a scrious chance of success. In the best of circumstances, Mr. Shultz would be able to do little more than start a process. It is not clear that the ground has been well-prepared for peace negotiations, and the compressed period of time outlined by Mr. Shultz seems unrealistic in view of the impending Israeli elections and the complex political crosscur-rents in the Arab world. Still, we do agree with the need for some form of international framework for negotiations. We also support the idea that two related sets of negotiations will be needed, one on

But the West Bank and Gaza do not lend themselves readily to a straight-forward application of the "territory for peace" formula from United Na-tions Resolution 242, as was the case with Smai. This is why some form of transitional accompanies essential transitional arrangement is essential. and why creative new political con-cepts involving Israel, the Palestinians and Jordan are required that would allow for shared sovereignty, joint authority, open borders and so on. The violence of the past three months has driven home the centrality of the Israeli-Palestinian dimension of the broader conflict. Our group has concluded that, while Jor-dan has a central role to play, Palestinians should be represented in ne-gotiations with Israel by spokesmen of their own choosing, whether in a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delega-tion or in some other configuration. We feel that the United States should have no objection to the participation of Palestinians who are on record as being prepared to coexist with the state of Israel, are committed to peaceful negotiations, can contribute to that objective, and agree

But we recognize that Palestinians are unlikely to come forward to negotiate with Israel without the implicit or explicit endorsement of the Palestine Liberation Organization. We also recognize that Israelis, even those most eager to negotiate, will be reluctant to deal directly with the PLO leadership. Still, we believe that it is possible to arrange for Israeli-Palestinian negotiations and that this should be a cen-tral goal of U.S. diplomatic efforts. With the arrival of the Soviet for-eign minister, Eduard Shevard-nadze, in Washington this week, it is appropriate to emphasize that the Soviet Union does have a role 10 play in Arab-Israeli peacemaking. This derives partly from its relations with Syria and the PLO, and from the sense among Arabs that negotiations must take place within an intions must take place within an international conference with Moscow's participation. Indeed, it seems doubtful that any Arah party will respond positively to the Sbultz plan unless Moscow is already on record in support of the current initiative. We must recognize that the Sovier Union is once again active throughout the Middle East and that we will have to maintain a serious dialogue about regional issues, including the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The initial focus of any negotiations will necessarily be on transitional arrangements. But those involved must also have an idea of what will come next. We believe that America is well-positioned to articulate a future vision of how Israelis. Palestinians, Jordanians and other Arab parties can attain their rights to security and self-determination through some political formula based on ideas of peaceful interchange and political pluralism, and the exchange of "territory for peace" as envisaged in Resolution 242. Concepts of federation or confederation, respect for minority rights, economie development and principles of democratie governance are all potential building blocks for a just, lasting and genuine peace settlement. Finally, we want to emphasize that the details of an Arab-Israeli peace settlement should not, indeed cannot, be successfully dictated by the United States or any other outside party. Working out the terms of an agreement is up to the parties who have to live with the results. It is the durability of any agreement that should be foremost in the minds of Americans. U.S. interests, we have no doubt, will be well served by widening the scope of Arab-Is-raeli peace. How that is done is less important than that it be done, and that the process start as soon as possible. Then, perhaps, we will again witness Arab and Israeli leaders making peace with one another as they did nine years ago.

N EW YORK — Whether they support or oppose the views of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel, people ought to be clear about the meaning of Security Council Resolution 242 of 1967.

Mr. Shamir contends that Israel's withdrawal from

Sinai satisfies the requirements of 242 and that the resolution does not apply to other occupied territories. And he rejects a fundamental tenet of 242: the "territory for peace" formula. These are not problems of technical interpretation. They are central to the question of whether negotiations can ever take place. Ruling out the "territory for peace" formula makes negotiations virtually impossible and negates any hope for progress toward peace. So does the unrealistic call by Arabs and Palestin-ians for complete Israeli withdrawal to the 1967 lines. Golda Meir, Shimon Peres, Yitzbak Rabin, Ahha

Eban and a host of other Israeli leaders have been clear, as has the state of Israel for years, on the following points about 242; It did not call for total Israeli withdrawal to the pre-June 1967 lines, as the Arabs and Russians contend to this day; it does apply to all occupied territories; it is based on the fundamental principle of "territory for peace." In November 1967, Israel held this view with the United States. The Likud's nonacceptance of this historical interpretation goes back to when the former prime minister, Menachem Begin, decided to leave the Israeli government in August 1970 because Israel accepted 242 with the clear meaning described above.

Mr. Shamir says he accepts 242. Indeed he does — but only on the basis of his interpretation.

The fundamental question is whether holding on to all of the occupied territory or seeking a territorial compromise has the better chance of protecting Israel's security within defensible borders, while taking into account as well the legitimate interests of the Palestinians. These are hard and difficult choices.

But it is important that the record of Resolution 242.

be clear; it applies to all the occupied territories on the basis of the principle of "territory for peace."

Mr. Carlucci is approaching this new phase of U.S.-Soviet military relaregion where armies have been used primarily to quell their own or neightions with cool poise — interested, inquiring but insistent on facts before Slovenia illustrates the furthest the value of words can be judged. How he tries in practice to news conference afterward.

He is a big, burly, square-faced man with unruly hair, what there is of it, and be wore his dark civilian smit uneasily. He has none of the polish of his senior Polithuro comrade, Mikhail Gorbachev. In public, be stuck to tired refrains without much effort to make the Gorbachevian "new thinking" more credible in defense affairs. But something important was beginning to happen. The chiefs of staff of the two sides, Marshal Sergei Akhromeyev and Admiral William Crowe Jr., who met informally during the December summit meeting in Washington, are to meet again to follow up on proposals for all kinds of talks and exchanges, ranging from how to han-dle incidents between their forces, to sending lecturers to each other's war colleges, to discussing why they equip and train and deploy forces as they do.

It is another step in Soviet emer-gence from the obsession with secrecy, not glasnost in this case but an understanding that secrecy breeds suspicion. Mr. Yazov said Moscow was preparing to publish data about its forces, which it normally refused to do even though the West did so.
Mr. Carlucci said that while Mr. Yazov offered no specifics on how the change in Soviet military doctrine was being effected, the general said that with time it would become evident from Soviet exercises and training. Meanwhile, NATO is preparing to respond to the year-old Warsew Pact invitation for talks on military doctrine between the alliances.

These are not negotiations, which are continuing in Geneva on missiles and space. But it can be more important if the people whose job it is to prepare for war against each other understand the other side's thinking. Western officials tend to worry when the Russians smile, for fear the Western public will conclude that defense is no longer needed. This is due as much to mistrust of the urge to optimism in democracies as it is to distrust of Soviet intentions. It is unworthy. Surely, given adequate infor-mation the public can judge whether the actual threat from guns and tanks and missiles is receding or whether they are getting snake oil.

That is the value that can come from these imprecedented talks as they are continued and broadened. The West, which has to publish its doctrines and procurements and budgets, can only gain by provoking the Russians to explain themselves. Mr. Yazov did not choose or was not able to articulate elearly what Moscow expects to gain in exchange for what it already knows about the West. But obviously it is a hope to be more convincing in its assurances that it does not plan to attack.

That is what President Eisenhower was trying to persuade the Russians of when he offered his "open skies" pro-gram to monitor each other's military activities. Then, Moscow denounced the idea as spying and wrapped itself in its riddles. Technology has long since ended that issue, but at the price of an arms race that might have been avoidable if there weren't such efforts at concealment and surprise.

Mr. Gorbachev's insistence on a formal communique with Yugoslavia hinting that Moscow no longer claims a right to support Communist regimes by force is another attempt at

The historical possibilities of these developments are fascinating. It would be as wrong to reject them in blind cynicism as to embrace them in blind credulity.

100, 75 AND 50 YEARS AGO

1888: William Mourned BERLIN - In to-day's [March 20] sitting of the Reichstag, the President read the draft of the address in reply to the Imperial message. In it the House expressed gratitude to the Em-peror [Frederick III] for overcoming all obstacles and assuming without delay the Imperial dignity with its rights and duties, and also thanks His Majesty for his assurances. The address proceeds to record the sorrow of the Deputies at the loss of the great ruler [William I] to whom, it says, Germany owes the reconstitution of her unity, and whose life was devoted to the strengthening of Germany's in-lluence and position, who was the gnardian of peace and whose efforts aimed at promoting the welfare of all.

tained in the phrase: "We are perfectly mated." Their "higher morality" edding was denounced at the time by many clergymen as "moral anarchy." "I am my busband's equal part-ner," said Mrs. Washburne to-day [March 20]. "I have my separate bank account and half of all his earnings. I am in no way subject to my hus-band's will. The result is there has been no ripple in our married life." 1938: Protest to Franco

LONDON - The British government has addressed a strong note of protest to General Francisco Franco on the bombing of Barcelona, it was learned here tonight [March 20]. The note expresses horror at the intensification of recent bombings which have led to the loss of civilian life and points out that such practices are contrary to the principles of international law as based on established practices of civilization.

Democracy Is Peruvians' Best Defense

IMA, Peru — Fifteen years ago
Washington was caught by surprise when Salvador Allende, a Marxist, was elected to lead Chile. The subsequent U.S.-supported coup led to the military dictatorship of Augusto Pinochet, who has ruled to this day. President Allende was assassinated by the army, thousands of people have been killed, and Chile's 150-year-old tradition of democracy was laid to rest. In neighboring Peru, the chance of a Marxist government coming to power in elections two years hence is a real possibility. Yet Washington has paid little attention. What will it do when it wakes up this time? History should not be allowed to repeat itself. It is not too soon to rchearse the reasons why. Peru, one of the poorest countries in South America, is ruled by Alan García Pérez. At 37, he is a brilliant and dashing figure, with a flair for balcony oratory. The country has been under democratic rule for eight years now; it ed the democratic wave that has been washing the continent. But much of the glow is gone. Peru's military leaders bequeathed it an appalling legacy - a moribund economy and a mountain of debt. Mr. Garcia tried to jolt the economy out of its rut by announcing that Peru would limit debt repayments to not more than 10 percent of its foreign exchange earnings. And he kicked off a demand-led boom that produced the highest growth rate in Latin America.

But the boom is running its course, depleting scarce reserves, driving up imports and reintroducing a trend to hyperinflation. Now, of course, no international banker wants to know about Peru. There is no one to hail the country out.

By Jonathan Power

Mr. Garcia's other fatal inheritance is Sendero Luminoso, or Shin-ing Path, a brutal Maoist rebel movement. In December 1980, Lima residents awoke one day to find dogs hanging from lamp posts — the run-ming dogs of capitalism — and wall posters denouncing Deng Xiaoping and culogizing the Gang of Four. The group has grown at an alarming rate, feeding on the centu-ries-old resentment of the highland Indians, descendants of the Incas, many of whom still see the lowland middle classes as their oppressors. Peru is the most racially stratified country on the continent. Starting with the leftist military vernment of General Juan Valasco Alvarado in the 1970s, Peru began battling the poverty of the mountains. The general introduced a land reform program, bold in its intent, but a failure in its consequences. It created big state farms that in Indian eyes seemed merely to swap one master for another. This broke the back of the landed oligarchy, but fueled Indian bitterness. Mr. Garcia has sought to improve programs that provide advice and credit to Indian farmers in the Andes. But Peru lacks an efficient rural administration to oversee them. Yearly, Sendero has increased its reach. Bombings have become a regular occurrence in Lima. The Amer can, Soviet, Chinese and North Korean embassies have been hit. The army, in return, is ruthless, Torture and disappearances are common, and the Garcia government seems helpless to stop them.

Mr. Garcia's failed economic policies and uneven human rights record have lost him much domestic support. Meanwhile, the for-tunes of the United Left have risen. The United Left is a coalition of Marxist and socialist parties led by a former mayor of Lima, Alfonso Barrantes Lingán, a Marxist who placed second in the 1985 presidential election. The celebrated novelist, Mario Vargas Llosa, who today leads the rightist opposition, calls him "warm, shrewd and civilized."

To win power, Mr. Barrantes

probably would need to form a coalition with the center-right Chris-tian Democrats and smaller rightist parties, a not inconceivable scenario in Peru's convoluted political culture. He is a very different political customer from the boisterous. aggressive Mr. Allende, who nned anyone to his right. The political forces of the left, center and right are now even favorites in the next election. Although Mr. Garcia will be ineligible to run again, his party is better organized than its rivals; he is a master of political patronage. The right, after its stunning defeat in 1985, has re-covered its step thanks to Mr. Vargas Llosa, who uses his elegant oratory to warn the middle classes that an elected Marxist government would endanger their freedoms.

The word from the U.S. Embassy

here is that a Barrante victory would not be viewed as a repeat of Mr. Allende's in Chile; Peruvian democracy will be respected, for "better or worse." One must hope that Washington listens to its diplomats. A "Chilean" solution in Peru would give Shining Path legitimacy and resonance. For now, Peru's lively democracy contains it. Respecting and reinforcing this democracy is the only intelligent option. International Herald Tribune. All rights reserved.

Banks Dominate Issues In Fixed-Coupon Sector

By CARL GEWIRTZ

ARIS - Commercial banks dominated the Eurobond market's oew-issue calendar last week, accounting for 11 of the 24 fixed-coupon bonds that were launched. The activity, analysts say, reflects the strong increase in corporate demand for medium-term bank loans and the banks' desire to cover themselves against a possible rise in interest rates, or reduced liquidity in the interbank market, by locking in their access to funds.

In past years, the banks would have sold floating rate dollar notes. But that market shut down last year after investors became disillusicoed over the ability to trade such instruments. Banks swap the proceeds ioto cheap floating rate funds at a cost below Libor and ofteo below Libid, the bid rate, which is % point below the offered rate. But in order to do that, banks have to attract retail investors to buy the fixed-rate boods.

Because of the debt crisis, bank paper is oot especially popular with institutional investors these days. As a result, the banks tap currency sectors where institutional buyers are less important than retail clients.

than retail clients. Dazzled by the double-digit coupons available on Australian dollar paper and oear double-digits on Canadian dollars, retail investors pay more attention to the choice of currency than to the credit of the issuer. This largely explains wby so few issues are denominated in U.S. dollars, a sector in which institutional investors are dominant. The retail investor is notoriously unsophisticated as witnessed by the popularity of "household" names like Michelin, which has never sought a credit rating, or Kodak, whose debt was once rated triple-A but which now is officially single-A, although retail investors treat it as if it were still triple-A.

HE LACK of discrimination is also evident in the bank sector, where retail investors make oo distinction between subordinated bank paper and senior debt. In the event of a collapse, holders of subordinated debt would rank just ahead of stockholders in getting paid. Banks are eager to sell long-term subordinated debt as it is now considered by most regulatory authorities as a substitute for capital.

Amsterdam-Rotterdam Bank and National Westminster Bank both issued 300 million Deutsche marks of subordinated 10-year paper last week and neither was obliged to reward investors with more generous terms to compensate for the lower ranking. With an almost audible shrug of the shoulders, syndicate managers say the issuers theoretically should pay more.

By week's end, NatWest's 6 percent bonds offered at a price of 100% were quoted at a discount of 97.85 for a yield of around 6.3 percent. Amro's 6% percent bonds traded at 97.90 for a yield of

The other bank issues were all senior debt. Both Deutsche Bank and Societé Générale Nederland tapped the DM sector wirb five-year notes bearing coupons of 5 percent. Premium offering prices of 101 on Deutsche Bank and 100% on Società Generale cut the yield to investors to below 5 percent, although the issues ended trading at discounts that lifted yields to just over

But that could change, analysts at Nomura Securities say. In their weekly bond letter, they say that a weakening dollar starting at midyear and slow German growth that will probably lead to a to switch toto DM boods.

They predict that DM boods, "which currently offer solid fundamental value with comparatively little downside risk," will outperform yen bonds. These experts see the dollar falling from its current trading range of 1.68-1.70 DM to 1.60 DM by midycar

Their view, shared by Giles Keating at Credit Suisse First Boston, is that steady but slow U.S. progress in cutting the trade deficit will require renewed dollar weakness to keep up the momentum of improvement.

Meanwhile, German investors and others oo the Cootinens remain transfixed by high coupoo paper. The currency of the month is the pound, which many analysts believe is poised to gain further against the mark, to 3.20 DM from the current range of

Telefónica Wins Contract

Will Renovate Argentine Phones

MADRID - Spain's telephone company, Telefonica, has agreed to take over the management of Argentina's telecommunications company and invest hundreds of mil-lions of dollars in upgrading the country's ailing telephone system. Telefónica woo the cootract against competition from a consor-tium led by the West German electronics company Siepnens AG.

Luis Solana, chairman of Compañia Telefonica Nacional de España, said an agreement would be signed on Thursday. The agreement was a break-through for Telefócica, in which the Spanish state has a minority stake, in its quest for an interna-tional role, Mr. Solana said. Telefônica failed last December in a joint bid with a French-owned company, Comunicaciones Chile, to acquire a controlling stake in Chile's state telephone company. The stake was awarded to the Australian businessman Alan Bond, for $271 million. In the Argentine venture, a con-sortium led by Telefonica would acquire up to 40 percent of a new venture that would take over the assets of Argentina's state telephone company, Entel.

The balance would be held by the Argentine government, local investors and employees,

Mr. Solana said the consortium would invest $750 million "give or take 20 percent" over three to five years to renovate the phone system.

As a condition of the agreement, the Argentine government has agreed to write off Entel's debts, Mr. Solana said. The World Bank will nominate consultants to evaluate Entel's assets, while Citibank will draw up a financial package, he said.

The agreement was another step in Argentina's program of privatiz-ing uoprofitable state companies. Telefònica officials said. In February, Aerolineas Argentinas said it had a conditional agreement to sell a stake of up to 40 percent to Scan-dinavian Airlines System.

Has Frank Lorenzo Met His Match?

By Martha M. Hamilton and Frank Swoboda

Washington Past Service
WASHINGTON — For the first time in his career at the forefront of U.S. zirline deregulation. Frank A. Lorenzo may be in more trouble than he can handle. But oo one, including his most ardent detractors, is ready to count him out.

Last week, the chairman of Texas Air Corp. found himself in hot water with his unions, the courts and the poblic over his high-risk strategy for reducing labor costs at Eastern Air Lines. It was so bad that, on Thursday, Mr. Lorenzo and Eastern's president, Phil Bakes, were lobbying in Congress, trying to head off a strongly worded resolution calling for an investigation of Eastern and its parent, Texas Air,

At the same time, Mr. Lorenzo's lawyers were in U.S. District Court trying to fend off a contempt citation. Eastern had been cited for making major corporate changes during contract occopitations with its unions when it tried to sell its air shuttle to another of Texas Air's subsidiaries.

Meanwhile, in another courtroom in the same courthouse, Eastern's lawyers were fighting efforts by the airline's pilots to block the use of strikebreakers in the event of a labor stoppage.

Texas Air officials, fenced in by labor's counter-attack, cootended last week that the unions chose to go to the mimeograph machines and megaphones and polarize the process," as Mr. Bakes put phones and polarize the process," as Mr. Bakes put it, rather than trying to reach a negotic: d settlement. But union officials appear confident that their legal and public relations campaign against Mr. Lorenzo may be paying off:

"I think it's clear the worm is turning, although I don't think it's turned," a union official said.

Last October, Eastern and the union that represents its machinists, baggage handlers and ramp workers served ootices on each other to begin bargaining on a new agreement. Then on Nov. 10.

Eastern declared an impasse amid preparations for a possible April 1 strike, which the unions insist

Mr. Lorenzo is counting on.
On Dec. 31, the airline's contract with the 12,000-member International Association of Machimists ended, although its terms remain in effect. While planning for a possible strike — prepara-tions that have cost the company as much as 570 million — Eastern also was making plans to spin off key assets and operations to newly formed subsidiaries. Eastern unions contend that the transfers are a strategy to salvage the valuable parts of Eastern if the strike strategy fails and be

Mr. Bakes denies that the company wants a strike and defends the spin-offs as necessary to Eastern's financial survival. He also said unequivocally that Eastern would not seek bankruptcy pro-tection or try to sell the entire company if the airime fails to win concessions from its union

"We've ruled that ont, Bankruptcy never has been an option," Mr. Bakes said. He was equally emphatic in declaring: "The airline is not for sale. We want to make this work."

In a document circulated oo Capitol Hill by Eastern management oo Friday, the company said bankruptcy "defies logic." Union strategists assume that Mr. Lorenzo, who took Continental Airlines, another subsidiary, into bankruptcy proceedings and forced a change in labor contracts, cannot afford another such move. The unions sought and obtained from Congres.

U.S. Moves To Avert a Run On FCA's Thrift

By Nathaniel C. Nash

WASHINGTON — In an emer-gency move, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board has announced that it will guarantee against loss all depositors and general creditors of American Savings & Loan Associa-

American Savings, based in Stockton, California, is a unit of the beleaguered Financial Corp. of America. The announcement was made Friday after American Savings, the second largest U.S. savings institution with $33.7 billion in assets, disclosed a significant wors-ening of its financial condition.

In a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission on its con-dition as of the end of 1987, American Savings said it had a $106 million negative net worth, compared with a previously estimated posi-tive net worth of $20 million. Bank board officials said they took the emergency steps to pre-vent panic among depositors and

The extraordinary public an-nouncement was the second time in two days that a federal regulatory agency had offered a blanket guarantee to ward off possible runs at major financial institutions.

On Thursday, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. announced a $1 billion interim rescue plan for First RepublicBank Corp. of Dallas. The agency said it would guarantee all deposits and obligations of the 73 subsidiary banks of the bolding company, which has $33.2 billion in assets.

Officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank said the idea of offering the bianket insurance for American Savings came from the FDIC's action a day carlier.

Banking and savings industry experts say there has been an unspoken regulatory policy since the Continental Illinois Bank & Trust Co. failure in 1984: When a big institution that into trouble results. institution runs into trouble, regulators cannot let it fail, lest the reverberations injure the entire domestic financial system.

Moreover, in the case of a bank or savings institution, if the government does not guarantee deposits above the normal $100,000 limit, these deposits would be withdrawn within days after the institution ran into trouble, accelerating its de-

The capital position of American Savings has eroded steadily over the past year as loan problems continued to mount and rising interest rates stymied FCA's plan to overcome its problems by buying and selling a portfolio of mortgagebacked securities. In Debt Crisis, Creditors Become More Forgiving

By Hobart Rowen Washington Past Service

WASHINGTON - Until recently, debt forgiveness for trou-bled Third World nations was a "taboo subject." If you were to speak of it in official circles, it could only be couched in terms of such limited and familiar remedies as loan renegotiation, reconstruction, rollovers, stretch-outs, even shaving of interest rate spreads.

But wiping out the actual principal, or forgiving the interest pay-ments, was a co-co, proposed only by academics and a few politicians such as Senator Bill Bradley, a Democrat of New Jersey.

Now, all that has changed, Be-cause most of the less developed countries are mired in low growth, it is increasingly difficult for them to service debts that have piled up through excessive borrowing in the late 1960s and 1970s.

Total outstanding debt as reported to the World Bank zoomed from $557 billion in 1982 to $931 billion at the end of 1987, more than half of it concentrated in 17 major debtor countries.

Faced with this overwhelming debt, at least 10 debtor nations have stopped paying interest to commercial banks over the past half-dozen years. In 1987, Bolivia was allowed to buy back its bank debt at 10 cents on the dollar. Two regional banks, Bank of Boston and Riggs National Bank of Washington, wrote off some of their loans as uncollectible. Other banks scrambled to provide greater re-serves against potential losses.

Outright debt relief gained its biggest backing when the United States endorsed a plan by Mexico and Morgan Guaranty to swap some of Mexico's bank loans, at a discount, for loog-term boods backed by U.S. Treasury securities. The Mexican plan did not suc-ceed as well as hoped, largely because the banks had no assurance that the new bonds, prior to maturing, might not suffer the same discounted fate as old Mexican debt. In the end, Mexico obtained a reduction of only about $1 billion in its debt, against the $10 billion that had been hoped for. Nonetheless, the Mexican agreement holds great significance. John Williamson, a senior economist at the Institute for International Economics in Washington, said that a precedent had been es-tablished for debt relief, "and the questions are how and under what circumstances debt relief should be legitimized," he said. Neither commercial bankers nor the World Bank and International Monetary Fund endorse the sweeping kinds of debt relief proposed by Senator Bradley, or any of the ma-

U.S. Opposes IADB Funding

CARACAS - The Reagan administratioo made clear on Sunday that it would oppose oew funding for the Inter-American Development Bank until the agency agrees to changes in its lending proce-

A statement by W. Allen Wallis, the U.S. undersecretary of state for economic af-fairs, put an end to hopes that the two-year funding dispute between the United States and Latin American debtor countries would be resolved quick-

"We will not change our position this year, oext year or the year after," Mr. Wallis said as be arrived in Caracas for the bank's annual meeting, which

Yet, a trend is in the making away from the present strategy built around the so-called Baker Plan, which contemplates oot debt relief, but expanded lending coupled with economic reforms among the recipient oations.
On Capitol Hill, and within the IMF and World Bank, the search is on for a plan that would cut the debt service burden of the Third World without causing the banks to swallow an enormous loss, and without requiring Congress and other legislative bodies in cough up buge amounts of oew capital.

There is general agreement that, in solving the debt crisis, the first step is to stimulate economic growth in the debtor countries. By 1985, the U.S. Treasury secretary, James A. Baker 3d, recognized that to meet stern IMF loan conditions, the borrowing counvestment and consumption that

Europeans Criticize U.S. Farm Plan

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches CONSTANCE, West Germany European officials assailed U.S. demands for elimination of agricultural subsidies as unrealistic on Sunday, at the end of a meeting of trade ministers from 30 nations.

The countries, all members of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, were holding informal talks, trying to remove some obstacles to a general multilateral agreement on world trade liberalization. Martin Bangemann, the West German economics minister, said a proposal by the United States that all farm subsidies be abolished over 10 years from 1990 was unrealistic. "The proposal cannot be trans-lated into actual policy," he said.

"It has to be translated into some form of reality we can work with."
The United States and several other nations say that European Community farm subsidies result in world markets being swamped with low-price produce. The 12-member EC has made counterproposals for short-term measures to fix export prices in the sectors of cereals, sugar and dairy products.

Willy De Clercq, the EC's external relations commissioner, said at the end of the talks, which began Friday, "There has been no movement on agriculture. Everybody has just repeated his position."

He said the EC was "ready to adapt the Common Agricultural Policy, but not to ruin or spoil it." A ministerial conference of the 96 GATT members will be held in Montreal, starting Dec. 5.

Chafing Under WPP Yoke, 6 Resign From Lord, Geller

By Philip H. Dougherty

NEW YORK - Angered by their loss of autonomy, six top executives have left the Lord, Geller, Federico, Einstein advertising agency, a subsidiary of WPP Group, to set up their own shop.

The departure on Friday was ied by Richard J. Lord, the chief executive, who is now chairman and chief executive of Lord, Einstein, O'Neill & Partners, He was joined by Arthur W. Einstein Jr., president of Lord, Geller, Kevin B. O'Neill, executive vice president and creative director. Edward D. Vaccastic vices where the president and creative director; Edward D. Yaconetti, vice chairman; C. Ray Freeman, executive vice president; general manager, and Lewis E. Eiehenholtz, senior vice president, chief financial officer.

Young & Rubicam invested in the new agency and is, in effect, a seventh partner, Mr. Lord said.

Lord, Geller had been part of JWT Group when WPP, a British company, took over JWT last year.

Martin Sorrell, WPP's chairman, then forced Lord, Geller to withdraw from the competition for the $100 million account of the new Saturn car from General Motors Corp., because J. Walter Thompson is a major Ford Motor Co. agency. In another move said to have rankled, WPP was reportedly interested last summer in setting up a second European network under the Lord, Geller name.

Mr. Lord said that until he was told to drop the Saturn competition, he had run Lord, Geller autonomously, even after J. Walter Thompson Co. bought the agency. Lord, Geller was formed in 1967.

"I didn't like being bought and sold like furniture," Mr. Lord said Friday, "I don't want to work for Martin." Lord, Geller hills about $250 million, with about half of that coming from International Business Machines Corp.

De Benedetti Is Amassing Cash

MILAN — The Italian entreprenent Carlo de Benedetti has filled his coffers to finance his drive for control of Société Générale de Belgique by selling his food businesses to Nestle SA of Switzerland, analysts say, Mr. de Benedetti and Nestle, one of the world's biggest food concerns, said Friday that Nestle would buy the activities of Mr. de Benedetti's Buitoni SpA for 1.6 trillion lire ($1.29

Analysts speculated that Mr. de Benedetti had agreed to sell the business to help fund his costly battle 10 control Générale, Belgium's largest company, which he wants to use as a linchpin for a pan-European conglomerate.
"The de Benedetti group was not really burt-ing for cash. It did not bave to sell Buitoni," said a Milan financial analyst who asked not to be identified. "But de Benedetti has spent a lot more than he originally planned for Générale.

"This deal gives his group more liquidity to maneuver with. De Benedetti likes to have cash. He doesn't like to finance with a lot of debt," the analyst said. Nestlé bas allied itself with Mr. de Benedetti in the Societé Generale battle by taking n minority stake in his new Belgian holding company, Europe 92.

Belgian brokers estimate that Mr. de Benedetti has spent more than $1 billion in fighting a Belgian-French alliance for control of Generale, a conglomerate with holdings in more than 1,300 companies around the world. But a spokesman for CIR SpA, Mr. de-Benedetti's main holding group, said that the Buitoni agreement was not related to the tal over battle and that CIR had been negotiatin : with Nestle for about seven months.

He said CIR planned to use proceeds from the sale to bolster its main activities in del processing, financial services, auto comprenents and publishing. He added that acquistions in those sectors would be studied."

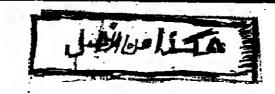

CIR controls the French auto-parts make Valeo and Mr. de Benedetti's French-bas holding company. Cerus. In Italy, its vastinies ests include key stakes in Oliverii SpA. which Mr. de Benedetti is chairman.

"It really makes sense for De Benedetti ! move out of the food sector," said Mari Christine Keith at ARK Securities in London To take on big players in the food sector, so as Nestle, Buitoni would need to make a lot investments "

Buttoni and its subsidiaries employ 8.00 people, operating primarily in Italy France. The group had 1987 revenue of 21% trillion lire and net profit of 51 billion live M de Benedetti acquired the unprofitable Buita in 1985 for about 160 billion lire.

Builoni went on a buying spree after returned to profit. But Mr. de Benedeni's pa to become a force in the food sector hit a spawhen the government blocked Buitom's p chase of a big state-run food group. Some ball inside to center Tom Greis. "They're much better now than when we played back in November," said Villanova's coach, Rollie Massimino. "But I think we're a lot better, too. Our kids know what they have to do and they know it won't be easy, but it shouldn't be.

"This time of year you have to carn everything you get." Illinois found that out the hard way last year when it was bounced in the first round by Austin Peay. The Illini struggled for a while with Texas-San Antonio on Friday but should be sharper agaiost Villanova. They'd have to be. Illinois only got a combined 17 points from star forwards Nick Anderson and Kenny Battle against UT-

SA. That wasn't likely to happen again, and Massimino knew it. The most intriguing game of the day shaped up in the West, where top-seeded Arizona (32-2) was to take on Scion Hall (22-12). During their romp over Cor-nell Friday, the Wildeats lost senior forward Tom Tolbert with a back strain. Coach Lute Olson said Saturday that Tolbert would play; but if he couldn't, the Pirates might be able to work Arizona over inside, especially with

As with many of the E Paso. Without Tolbert, Arizomatch-ups around the country, na is thin up front and Seton Hall, with recent victories over Pittsburgh (twice), Villanova and Georgetown, has proven it can play with anybody. "We've seen them play a lot on television and we know they're good," said Arizona guard Steve Kerr. "We know they'll play a lot more physically than most of the teams out here in the West do. We'll have to be prepared to deal

The other game in the West matched Nevada-Las Vegas (26-4) and Iowa (22-9). Neither of these teams has played well recently, struggling to the finish of the regular season and lucky to survive first-round games against Southwest Missouri State and Florida State, respectively.

The advantage here should lie with the Hawkeyes because of depth and revenge. Last year, they were 20 minutes from the Final Four with a 20-point lead against UNLV in the West Regional final and couldn't hang on. This is their chance to get back a little bit at the Rebels, although in all likelihood, the winner won't go very much farther than the round of 16.

Roman Polanski: Coming Up Roses On Stage, Screen

International Herald Tribune

PARIS — "My sore throats are worse than anyone's," Jane Austen wrote in "Persuasion," expressing a truth about how we view our own ailments. So here is Roman Polanski in his bright Fan's flat diagnosing his participation in the cur-rent flu epidemic as tuberculosis. Late tuberculosis. He's heing excessively brave and, for a man at death's donr. awfully cheerful. He can't help it: for Polanski right now, everything's coming Polanski's new film. "Frantic," has just and largest and largest and largest productions. opened in the United States and teeters at the top of the box office charts be-tween second and third place. "Frantic" opens in Paris at the end of March.

"It's very rare for a director to be performing in a play at the same time his film is opening." Polanski says. "I'm afraid that something awful will happen to me because I have so much luck suddenly. This may be my year."

He has had plenty of years that weren't his. His last film, "Pirates," was so awful that sometimes, he says, he wakes up just glad that he doesn't have to direct "Pirates" any more. A childlike romp, "Pirates" was conceived in 1974 when Poleschi the time that the time lanski thought the time was ripe for fantasies ("Star Wars" proved him right), but it wasn't made until 1986; too late. "Frantic," an impercably made thriller, is what people want today, Polanski says, an adult film,

"I needed a movie. I was in the pits morally and financially after 'Pirates.' Warner Brothers asked me if I had some-thing in mind and I said a thriller. They flipped — or as the French say, ils ont flashé — and said let's sign." They then asked Polanski what the thriller was about, and he thought fast, "Well, there's an American who comes to Paris with his wife and she disappears. And they flashed again and I had to get to the drawing board."

Polanski and his long-time French cowriter, Gérard Brach, then concocted a story in which the American (Harrison Ford) is a doctor in Paris for a medical convention. One reason Polanski wanted to make the film was to be able, for once, to live at home while shonting and to show the Paris of today.

"This isn't the Paris of Irma la Douce," he says. There are sullen cab-drivers, awful nightclubs, drastic lan-guage problems, and the film opens on the peripherique road from the airport in an ugly gray dawn. The couple arrive at their modernized old hotel room, wait for breakfast and then, while the husband is taking a shower, the wife suddenly vanishes although room service hasn't really been as slow as all that.

"Frantic" has been praised in the United States as Hitchcockian and, in that it is classic and funny, the label fits. It doesn't have the unnerving Polanski touch of "Rosemary's Baby" or "Chinatown" or "The Trans" town" or "The Tenant" - the disquieting sense that nothing is as it seems, the morbidity that from his early films in Poland lurked in the most common

"I wanted to do something that was very stylish and well-constructed and with the unities of time and place," Polanski says. He began moving away from his earlier provocative and quirky films with "Tess," (1979) an adaptation of Thomas Hardy's "Tess of the d'Urbervilles," which he called "the film of my

Polanski, 54, is sprightly and yet doughty. Although of necessity an optimist, he has long been thought to have a dark view of life and even before his appearance in "La Métamorphose" was called Kafkaesque. He doesn't like the description and says he read Kalka as a kid, "and only as a kid," when he discovered books by the Polish writers Witold Gombrowicz and Bruno Schulz and also

Polanski during filming of "Frantic": "The more fantastic is your story the more specific you have to be with detail."

Kafka in a neglected library in Krakow. It was during the Stalin period and such books were not supposed to be read.
"I was so amazed that such writing could exist when they were feeding you with social realism and boring you to death. Suddenly I was reading something com-pletely different, it was like reading fairy

There is no better craftsman in films and no one is more attentive to detail. "That's maybe what I learned from Kafka years and years ago, to be convincing with the detail, the more fantastic is your story the more specific you have to be with your detail."

If the reviews for "Frantic" from the bigger American cities are enthusiastic, the mood changes in smaller towns, Po-lanski says. He claims that critics review his private life (he fled California in 1977 before sentencing on a morals charge involving a teen-age girl) just as they review other directors' overspending.

"These days they talk mostly about directors' private lives or their problems with the studio. I was appalled when I read reviews of films like The Year of the Dragon' or 'Revolution.' Cimino and Hudson are both directors who are very talented and who failed. Yes, they failed,

One praising view of "Frantic" suggests that in it Polanski is trying to send out the message "that he's not a mon-ster . . . he's on his best behavior, you can sense him trying to be a good boy."

A good boy? "I feel I've always been a good boy. I was maybe mischievous but I think they wanted to make me a monster. The reasons are obvious, it started after the death of Sharon.

Polanski's wife, the actress Sharon Tate, was murdered by the Manson gang in 1969. A certain reaction among the American public was nearly palpable, Polanski says.

"They felt guilty, I could feel it, because my pregnant wife was slaughtered by American crazies. It seemed like I was a victim of that country. I felt it for years and years when I read about it."

There is a certain point, Polanski says, when guilt becomes unbearable and so the victim is made into a monster, "It makes you feel so much better immedi-

Polanski doesn't regret not being able to live in the United States; as a Paris-born Pole he is happy here. He does hope that he will be able to clear his name on the 1977 charge, for his own peace of mind, "I regret what happened, it was one of the worst periods of my life." By William Safire ASHINGTON — "You ever heard of the pol-mil weenies." asked Susan F. Rasky, a colleague at The New York Times. "Hot new locution at the Puzzle Palace and the Fudge Factory: 'He's one of Carlucci's new pol-mil weentes.' Check it out."

Why would officials at the Pentagon and State Department refer to Defense Secretary Frank Carineci's aides that way?

Pol-mil was easy enough to trace: it stands for "political-military" (or "politico-military"), and in the State Department the pol-mil bureau is the place where a tiny col-lection of hawks is allowed to assemble. Pol-mil types, with their crassly undiplomatic solutions, are tolerated in the building to be trot-ted out when hawkish members of Congress come to visit.

small." Since the 1780s, weeny or weenie has been used as a variant of the Scottish adjective wee, from the Old English wage, "weight," de-noting something of little weight or size. The word has been influenced by, and has influenced, tiny and teeny, producing teeny-weeny, a re-duplication used two generations ago to modify bilemi swimsuits, then considered daringly small. The first use in its meaning of

"child" is credited by the Oxford English Dictionary Supplement to the 19th-century letters of Cecilia Ridley, who wrote in 1844: "Little weeny is growing visibly."

A second root, and source of more sinister senses, can be found. Wienerwarst, meaning "sausage of Vienna," appeared in 1889; this cured cooked sausage, more slen-der than a frankfurter, became known in the United States in the early 1900s as a wienie or weenie; in 1920, Sinclair Lewis used it in his novel "Main Street." In the mid20s, another sense surfaced: "the catch; the kicker, a surprise that may cause failure."

Wentworth and Flexner, in their Dictionary of American Stern

Dictionary of American Slang speculate that the origin may have been "in vaudeville or the movie industry, perhaps in reference in the large bladders used by comics to hit one another over the head in slapstick comedies. Such bladders are the descendants of the mock phallus wielded by ancient Greek-

Caution: Although a weenie has been known as a hot dog ever since the turn of the century, the new sense of hor dog — "one who per-forms ostentationsly" — is not applied to weenle. To avoid confusion with "show-off," some slanguists are using tube steak rather than hot
